

GEDWorks™ STUDENT PROFILE

COURTNEY L. – Alabama

Winn-Dixie (Southeastern Grocers)

Courtney L. recently earned her GED credential. Her scores earned her honors on three of the four test sections. “It takes away that little bit of shame and embarrassment [of not having graduated from high school],” she says. Courtney was pleased that her employer, Winn-Dixie, participated in GEDWorks so she could pursue her educational goal for free. She says they also provided her with a flexible work schedule so she could study and take the GED tests. Courtney said she feels that her employer views her in an even more positive light after earning her GED credential. She is working toward earning a promotion with Winn-Dixie. Courtney is also considering going back to school to study accounting.

- Courtney appreciated the support of her GED Advisor Katie. “She was super friendly and very encouraging. Anything that I was concerned about she would address.”
- Courtney appreciated the secure GED test environment which was free of distractions.
- “Others should go for it as well.”

GEDWorks™ STUDENT PROFILE

MARY S. – Maryland

Walmart

This mother of two has taken and passed her first two subject tests to earn her GED credential. She's ecstatic that Walmart is offering her this opportunity and access to the GEDWorks program free of charge. Earning her GED diploma has always been a goal of Mary's, but financial obligations prohibited her goal - until now. As a hard-working student, employee and soon a GED graduate, Mary believes that the example she sets will motivate her sons to take their education seriously.

- "I think it's pretty great. It's awesome."
- "I think if I wanted to do something else [professionally] I would be more able to."
- "I'm learning a lot... especially math."
